Subject: AOL/Netscape at it again to drag down the industry

AOL is at it again, trying to drag down the tech sector with pointless and sensationalistic litigation, continuing to falsely cast itself as a victim instead of accepting its true character as a has-been producer of inferior products. The consumer clearly had a choice of browsers, and chose the superior product in terms of performance, stability, support of open industry standards, and features. Suing Microsoft only confirms this point, and benefits no one.

Please, the sane world begs you to snuff this latest and most ridiculous lawsuit against Microsoft as soon as possible.
